ABSTRACT

UKRAINIAN SURNAMES IN CANADA

by

Luba Fedorkiw

This thesis presents a study of Ukrainian surnames in Canada, their retention and patterns of change. The introduction is chiefly concerned with the significant literature on Ukrainian anthroponymy and the principles laid down for this work.

Part One is divided into five chapters. The first chapter surveys the background and development of early Slavic personal and family names (surnames). The second chapter elaborates upon the types of Ukrainian family names, categorizing them into 1) surnames of relationship; 2) occupation, trade and profession; 3) descriptive characteristics; 4) toponyms; and two categories of non-Ukrainian elements and surnames of dubious or uncertain origin. The third chapter is devoted to the documentation of Ukrainian surnames prior to their transplanting to Canada. This is followed by the fourth chapter, which contains the conclusions of this thesis. The fifth chapter provides a selective semantic classification of Ukrainian surnames found in Canada, excerpted from F. Bogdan's Dictionary of Ukrainian Surnames in Canada, with correct English transliteration, Ukrainian spelling and accents. It is through this specific classification that the cultural heritage of Ukrainian surnames in Canada is explained.

Part Two examines the Canadianization of Ukrainian surnames. This section is divided into four chapters.

The first chapter discusses Canadianization as an important process involved in surname modification. It presents the types of changes and reasons responsible for these altered Ukrainian surnames. The second chapter provides insight into the onomastic and linguistic analysis of over 2,000 Ukrainian surname changes excerpted from the Manitoba Gazette (vols. 86-105), and compiled into dictionary form in the fourth chapter under the following typological scheme:

- 1) full assimilation, 2) partial assimilation, 3) hybridization and 4) Slavic to Slavic.

It is evident from the compiled surname changes that the majority of people who changed their surname were concerned mainly with adapting the original surname to the new host language system, rather than completely modifying it.

The concluding chapter attempts to assess the significance and need for further research in Ukrainian anthroponymy in Canada. The Appendix lists approximately 4,700 surnames found in this thesis, in alphabetical order.

INTRODUCTION

The study of Ukrainian Canadian surnames<sup>1</sup> (prizvyshsche)<sup>2</sup> is a paramount process encompassing the fields of history, religion and the social sciences. Just as the Ukrainian surname in the Ukraine followed similar patterns of development into all Indo-European languages, so too, thousands of Ukrainian surnames exposed to the English speaking milieu of Canada, experienced some type of modification or change. This process of surname modification resulted from the direct contact with a new language system, quite unfamiliar to the Ukrainian immigrant.

The Problem. The present study seeks to investigate the degree of retentiveness and modification of Ukrainian surnames in Canada, dealing specifically with surnames used among the general population. The study will be conducted in an onomastic and linguistic frame of reference. The aims of this thesis will be: (1) to provide a general survey of the development of the Ukrainian family names (surnames), with reference to their early documentation; (2) to classify the main types of Ukrainian surnames found in Canada, with correct English transliteration, Ukrainian spelling, accents and meanings, as presented in the Table of Contents; (3) to provide historical and cultural backgrounds for the Ukrainian surname in Canada, with reference to early Ukrainian immigration and possible circumstances involved in name changing; (4) to examine Ukrainian surnames, which because they had been written in the Cyrillic script, thereby lacking corresponding equivalents in the English alphabet, have been particularly vulnerable to modifications or deformation through transliteration; (5) to present and discuss linguistic trends and processes involved in the retentiveness or modification and change of Ukrainian surnames; (6) to supplement the study Canadianization of Slavic Surnames by Robert B. Klymasz as far as materials and chronology are concerned; (7) implementing J.B. Rudnyc'kyj's typological scheme of anthroponymic changes, to compile a dictionary of Ukrainian surname changes in Canada, particularly in the province of Manitoba for January, 1957 to July, 1976.

Present State of Research and Bibliographical Survey

Surveying the published literature in the field of Ukrainian onomastics, more specifically anthroponymy, it is quite evident that since the publication of Die Bildung der slavischen Personennamen by Franz Miklosich in 1860, until the 1970's, many Ukrainian and non-Ukrainian scholars have researched and introduced new materials with historical and linguistic interpretations in the field of Ukrainian anthroponymy.

1. N.F. Sumov: "Malorusskie famil'nye prozvaniya" ("Little Russian Surnames"), Kievskaya Starina (Kyjiv Antiquity) XI. (Kyjiv, 1885), 215-228, was the first to reveal the variety and abundance of Ukrainian surnames. In his article the author attempts for the first time to classify Ukrainian surnames into seven different groups, according to their origin and meaning. Sumov enumerates thirty-four suffixes used in forming Ukrainian surnames and provides related examples. Most unfortunately, the author does not indicate his sources.

2. V. Shcherbyna: "K istorii malorusskikh famil'nykh prozvanii" ("On the History of Little Russian Surnames"), Kievskaya Starina (Kyjiv Antiquity) VIII (1894), 278-282. The author discusses surnames used in the 18th century by common people and other surnames already discussed by Sumov. Shcherbyna's surnames are divided into the following categories: a) surnames of Cossacks and townsfolk, b) surnames of nobility (shyakhta) and c) surnames of christianized Jews.

3. E. Karnovich, in his monograph Rodovyya prozvaniya i tituly v Rossii i sliyaniye inozemcev s russkimi, (Generic Nicknames and Titles in Russia and the Amalgamation of Foreigners with Russians), St. Petersburg, 1886. devotes a few pages to Ukrainian names.

4. V. Okhrymovych: "Pro sil'ski prozvyshcha" ("About Village Surnames"), Zhytiye i Slovo (Life and Word), (L'viv, 1895), 302-307, tried to present a process in the creation of Ukrainian surnames from the 16th to the 17th centuries in the Carpathian Mountains of the Ukraine. The five systems for surname development devised by Okhrymovych were: a) maternal system (from the mother's name), b) paternal system (from the father's name), c) from the family name -- patriarchal, matriarchal or the oldest living member of the family, d) from the environment and occupation of an individual, and e) the individual system.

5. I. Franko, a prominent Ukrainian scholar in the 19th century, in his article "Prychynky do ukrayins'koyi onomastyky" ("Contributions to Ukrainian Onomastics"), 1906, reprinted in Onomastica, no. 14 (Winnipeg, Uvan, 1957), was first to treat Ukrainian surnames scientifically from a linguistic point of view. Franko dealt specifically with archaic Ukrainian surnames in the genitive form, which were once very popular in many regions of the Ukraine during the 16th to 17th centuries. The many interesting and valuable ideas and conclusions make this work a profitable asset in the field of Ukrainian onomastics.

6. M. Kornylovych: "Ohlyad narodnykh rodovykh prizvyshch na Kholmshchyni i Pidlyashi" ("Survey of Local Family Names of Kholm and Pidlyashya"), Etnohrafichnyj Visnyk (The Ethnographical Herald), V (Kyjiv, 1925), 11-123. The author restricts himself to a specific territory in the study of Ukrainian surnames, thereby allowing for a more in-depth study of the specific characteristics.
7. L.L. Humec'ka: "Slovotvorcha budova cholovichykh osobovykh nazv v ukrayins'kij movi XIV - XV st." ("Word Building of Male Personal Names in the Ukrainian Language of Fourteenth - Fifteenth Centuries"), Movoznavstvo (Philology), X (Kyjiv, 1952); and by the same author: "Zhinochi osobovi nazvy v ukrayins'kij aktovij movi XIV - XV st." ("Female Personal Names in the Ukrainian Legal Language of Fourteenth-Fifteenth Centuries"), Naukovi zapysky instytutu suspil'nykh nauk (Scholarly Writings of the Institute of Social Studies), Akademiya Nauk Ukrayins'koyi RSR, vol. III (Kyjiv, 1954).
8. Y.K. Red'ko: in his two books Suchasni Ukrayins'ki Prizvyshcha (Contemporary Ukrainian Surnames) (Kyjiv, 1966), and Dovidnyk Ukrayins'kykh Prizvyshch (Reference Book of Ukrainian Surnames) (Kyjiv, 1969), provides a thorough and extensive study of Ukrainian surname types. The books were published in order to serve a normative function, aiming at the communication media and government workers in the Soviet Ukraine. Another article, "Osnovni slovotvorchi typy suchasnykh ukrayins'kykh prizvzshch u porivnyanni z inshymy slovyans'kymy" ("Major Morphological Types of Contemporary Ukrainian Surnames in Comparison with other Slavic Ones") Filolohichnyj Zbirnyk (Philological Collection), ed. I.K. Bilodid, Kyjiv: Akademiya Nauk Ukrayins'koyi RSR, 1958, 112-129; is another important achievement in the study of Ukrainian anthroponymy.

9. O.B. Tkachenko: "Ukrayins'ki prizvzshcha z sufiksom -enko ta sporidneni utvorennya (pytannya pokhodzhennya)" ("Ukrainian Surnames with the Suffix -enko and Related Formations (Question of Origin)", Slovyans'ke movoznavstvo (Slavic Philology), no. II, Kyjiv: Akademiya Nauk Ukrayins'koyi RSR, 1958, 38-53. This scholarly article deserves high merit, as it represents well-studied material on surnames ending in -enko.

Outside of the Ukraine, contributions toward the study of Ukrainian surnames were made by:

10. Vasyl' Simovych, who is known<sup>in</sup> the field of linguistics as a grammarian. Nevertheless, he has contributed to Ukrainian onomastics the following works: a) "Ukrayins'ki jmennyyky cholovichoho rodu na -o v istorychnomu rozvytku i osvitlenni" ("Ukrainian Nouns in -o in the Historical Development"), Naukovyj Zbirnyk Vys. Ped. Instytutu im. M. Drahomanova, (Scholarly Collection of Ped. Institute of M. Drahomaniv), vol. I (Prague, 1929); b) "Istorychnyj rozvytok zdribnilykh ta zhrubilykh cholovichykh imen z okremisnoyu uvahoyu na zavmerli sufiksy" ("The Historical Development of Diminutives and Augmentatives of Masculine Names with Special Emphasis on Dead Suffixes") Zbirnyk referativ i zyizdu Slov. Filolhiv u Prazi "(Collection of Papers from Conference of Slavic Philologists in Prague), (Prague, 1929);

c) "Ukrayins'ki cholovichi imena na -no" ("Ukrainian Masculine Names in -no"), Zbirnyk Komisiyi dlya doslidzhennya istoriyi ukrayins'koyi movy, vol. I (Kyjiv, 1930);

c) "Ukrayins'ki prizvzshcha z khreshchenykh imen" ("Ukrainian Surnames Derived from Christian Names"), Nashi Dni (Our

Time), no. 8 (L'viv, 1943). The very titles of these works indicate the problems with which Simovych concerned himself.

His material was drawn from Old Ukrainian manuscripts and folklore, thus accumulating a new wealth of Ukrainian names.

The author also provided useful materials and conclusions as to the development of Ukrainian surnames, as well as highlights of the linguistic processes involved.

ll. J.B. Rudnyc'kyj inaugurated the systematic research of Canadian Slavic Names in his "Slavic Linguistic Atlas of Canada and the U.S.A." in 1949. Since then related reports AATSEEL Bulletin, vol. VII. 1. Philadelphia, 1949, pp. 13-14. and articles on the topic of Ukrainian onomastics have appeared in various scholarly publications. Articles by this author related to this thesis and used as source material are:

a) "Pro ukrayins'ki osobovi imennya" ("About Ukrainian Personal Names"), Propamyatna Knyha - Al'manakh, Postup (Progress), (Winnipeg, 1963), 49-53; b) "The Slavic Suffix -ep(a)," Canadian Slavonic Papers, IV (Toronto, 1959); c) "Canadianization of Slavic Names as a Linguistic Problem," Slavistica, no. 30 (Winnipeg, 1957), d) "Place Names and Language Contact," Slavic Studies "25" 1949-1974, (Winnipeg, 1974), 202-209; e) "Anthroponymic Changes in Canada and the U.S.A.," Dictionary of Ukrainian Surnames in Canada (Winnipeg, Vancouver: Uvan, 1975), 33-40.

12. E. Borshchak: "Les noms de famille ukrainiens," Onomastica, no. 18 (Winnipeg: Uvan, 1959). The author presents a synthesis of Ukrainian surnames achieved through an examination of suffixes.

13. J.P. Hursky: The Patronymic Surnames in Ukrainian, Ph.D. Thesis, University of Pennsylvania, 1957, developed informative and valuable information excerpted from early Kyjivan manuscripts and Cossack registers of the 17th century, in order to trace the linguistic and historical development of Ukrainian patronymic surnames, which are the oldest and most widely used among Ukrainians.

14. R.B. Klymasz: The Canadianization of Slavic Surnames: A Study in Language Contact, Master of Arts Thesis, University of Manitoba, 1960, published in part in Onomastica, no. 22 (Winnipeg: Uvan, 1961). The author provides a thorough methodological analysis of over two thousand Slavic surname changes in the province of Manitoba for the years 1937-1957, with emphasis on linguistic trends and background material concerning Slavic name-changing in Canada.

15. André de Vincenz: Traité d'anthroponymie houtzoule (A Treatise on Huculian Anthroponymy), (München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 1970). In his extensive study of Ukrainian surnames of the Hucul Land, Vincenz provides rich etymological development of Ukrainian surnames with the various dialect variations. A very important feature of the study is the historical documentation for each name. By far, it is an exhaustive work on one specific region of the Ukraine.

16. O.B. Unbegaun: Russian Surnames, (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1972), devotes one chapter to Ukrainian surnames, describing their various types and meanings. This work provides an excellent source for the origin and development of early Slavic personal names.

17. F. Bogdan: Dictionary of Ukrainian Surnames in Canada, (Winnipeg, Vancouver: Uvan, 1974). Similar to M. Benson's Dictionary of Russian Personal Names, it lists over thirty thousand Ukrainian surnames found in Canada, including their Canadianized forms. In being a first of its kind, this dictionary satisfies the need for a reference work on transliteration, stress and variety of Ukrainian surnames in Canada. It also serves as a basis for this thesis.

Other outstanding Ukrainian and non-Ukrainian scholars who have contribute notably to the field of Ukrainian onomastics are: W. Irkliewskyj, S.P. Hallick, V. Nimchuk, L. Onyshkevych, Yar Slavutych, E.C. Smith, I. Velyhors'kyj, V. Zyla and others.

Importance of the Study. In spite of the publications mentioned in the previous section, in the field of Slavic onomatology, except for F. Bogdan's Dictionary of Ukrainian Surnames in Canada, extensive research of Ukrainian-Canadian family names (surnames) has never been undertaken. Bogdan, in his work, does not go into explanations of the origin or meaning of each individual surname, but concentrates fully on the reproduction of the recorded spelling and accents. In view of this fact, a selected number of surnames have been excerpted from his work, and with an accompanying historical background of their development and transfer to Canada, have been classified into specific categories, as listed in the Table of Contents. The advantage of such an undertaking provides valuable information for many Ukrainian-Canadians as to the possible meaning of their individual surnames, thereby providing insight into their heredity.

The second part of this thesis continues the study of surname changing in Canada, begun by R.B. Klymasz in his M.A. Thesis, Canadianization of Slavic Surnames: A Study in Language Contact, for the years 1937-1957. The basic difference between the present study and Klymasz's are:

1) the surnames used in this thesis are only of Ukrainian origin, and 2) the typological scheme classifies the degree of assimilation of the Ukrainian surnames. The scheme is divided into the following categories of change: a) full assimilation, b) partial assimilation, c) hybridization and a marginal category, d) Slavic to Slavic, which deals with internal Slavic surname changes.

Sources Used. The first part of this thesis is based on material drawn from the Dictionary of Ukrainian Surnames in Canada. The semantic interpretation for the Ukrainian surnames enumerated were collected chiefly from the dictionaries listed in the bibliography, in addition to the listed source books. The second part of this thesis is based on material collected by the author (LF) during her field work in Winnipeg and vicinity during 1975-1976, and The Manitoba Gazette (January, 1957 to July, 1976).

Method of Procedure. The initial step in this study was to investigate and evaluate all the available materials dealing with the study of Slavic surnames, specifically -- Ukrainian. This took place in the Elizabeth Dafoe Library, University of Manitoba; the Ukrainian Cultural and Educational Center, Winnipeg; the Winnipeg Public Library; Manitoba Legislative Library and Archives. It was then realized that there exists a scarcity of materials in the study of Ukrainian-Canadian surnames. Before any analysis of Ukrainian surnames began, the scope and material under study was established. The first part of the thesis consists of excerpted Ukrainian surnames from Bogdan's dictionary, and with their classification into major categories with the aid of dictionaries and source books listed in the Bibliography. Historical background material was also drawn from the same source books. All Slavic names listed in the Manitoba Gazette from 1957-1976 as undergoing any kind of change, were excerpted to be processed for the second part of this thesis. Since information relating to the name-changer's ethnic descent was not provided, a certain amount of difficulty resulted in separating certain Ukrainian family names from other Slavic ones. Identical Ukrainian surname changes undergoing a similar modification in spelling were dated according to the first chronological change.

The sources consulted for background material in explaining various changes, with possible reasons for such occurrences were: V.J. Kaye, Dictionary of Ukrainian Biography; R.B. Klymasz, Canadianization of Ukrainian Surnames; J.B. Rudnyc'kyj, "Anthroponymic Changes in Canada and the U.S.A."; M. Marunchak, History of Ukrainians in Canada.

The system of transliteration used in this thesis is in accordance with Chuzhomovni Transliteraciyi Ukrayins'-kykh Nazv (Foreign Transliteration of Ukrainian Names) by J.B. Rudnyc'kyj, 1948.

Organization of the Thesis. Aside from the Introduction, this thesis is divided into two distinct parts. Part I surveys the background and development of Ukrainian personal and family names, with special attention to their early documentation. Emphasis is placed on their description and classification into four major and two minor categories: 1) surnames of relationship, 2) occupation, trade and profession, 3) descriptive characteristics, 4) Toponyms, 5) non-Ukrainian elements and 6) others -- a) non-Ukrainian elements, and b) surnames of dubious or uncertain origin. Part II discusses the historical and cultural background of the Ukrainian surname in Canada, with reference to the early Ukrainian immigration and circumstances involved in surname changing. In the chapter entitled "Onomastic/Linguistic analysis of Ukrainian Surname Changes," an attempt is made to examine the types of changes which occur in Ukrainian surnames found in Canada. Using Rudnyc'kyj's typological scheme in discussing surname changes, it is then applied in the classification of over two thousand documented Ukrainian surname changes excerpted from the Manitoba Gazette.

Each individual part of the thesis contains the findings and conclusions based on the material studied. As well, an appendix lists in index form all surnames found in the thesis.

Chapter I

The Development of Early Slavic Personal and Family Names

From early historical documents and treaties of the pre-Christian period (before the 10th century), it can be deduced that eastern Slavs who were the common ancestors of today's Russians, Byelorussians (White Russians) and Ukrainians, used single personal names which they received at birth.<sup>1</sup> These pagan Slavic names were the so-called dithematic (two theme) names,<sup>2</sup> characterized by compound nouns, combining two roots linked by a connecting vowel. They normally had "slav" (glorious), "mir" (grand), and "volod" (possessing, wealthy), as part of the name. Some examples of these dithematic names are:

- 1) Sebeslav - "self glorifier," 2) Ostromir - "sharp and glorious," 3) Vsevolod - "all and possessing."<sup>3</sup> These dithematic names and others such as Volodymir, Yaroslav and Zvenyslav signified the characteristics and future

Names of Scandinavian origin such as Rjurik (Hrørekr), Oleh (Helgi), Ihor (Ingvar) and Hlib (Gudeifr)<sup>5</sup> were imparted to the eastern Slavs by the early Varangian invaders who imposed their rule upon them, and were responsible for the founding of the early Kyjivan state. When the Rjurik dynasty established itself firmly, it named its ruler "Knyaz"<sup>6</sup> or prince. The first Kyjivan prince to possess a pagan Slavic dithematic name was Svyatoslav (957-972),<sup>6</sup> son of Princess Ol'ha and Prince Ihor.

With the acceptance of Christianity from Byzantium in 988 by Prince Volodymyr and the Kyjivan people,<sup>7</sup> names formerly given to children by their parents were altered. Generally, all the people had to be conferred with another single baptismal name or "imya" by the priest at the time of christening.<sup>8</sup> These baptismal names were naturally the original names of saints, and therefore, true Christian names. They were transplanted and utilized by the Eastern Slavs either directly from Byzantium<sup>9</sup> or via Bulgaria, which had been converted to Christianity earlier, in 865.<sup>10</sup> Early Church manuscripts and Povest' vremennykh let'<sup>11</sup> provide authentic examples of names used among the early eastern Slavs, for example, the baptismal name both of Princess Ol'ha, who accepted the name Helena,<sup>12</sup> and Prince Volodymyr, who took on the name Vasylyj.<sup>13</sup> The pagan dithematic names, after the 10th century, became bynames borne by princes.

It should be mentioned that the religious language of the eastern Slavs was Old Church Slavonic, referred to only as Church Slavonic from the 12th century onward.<sup>14</sup> The script used to record the baptismal names in their Slavic variation was devised by two brothers, S.S. Cyril and Methodius, who came to serve as missionaries among the Slavs in the 9th century.<sup>15</sup> Consequently, it was in the Church Slavonic form that early Byzantine names, whether of Greek (Stephanos), Hebrew (Shim'on) or Latin (Sergius) origin, spread and were documented among the eastern Slavs.<sup>16</sup> The many new baptismal names also existed in a popular or lay form differing slightly from Church Slavonic.

It was a common practice for parents to endow a child with a second, "non-ecclesiastical" name in addition to the baptismal name conferred by the priest at the time of christening.<sup>17</sup> The expression used for this second name was "prozvyshche,"<sup>18</sup> used today to refer to the surname. In onomastic and historical work, "nekalendarne imya" is frequently used. Literally it means "non-calendar name"; a name not found in the Church calendar, in which saints were listed.

These second names, bynames or nicknames given by the parents to the child, were not the only ones an individual held. Neighbours or the individual himself would use any name he/she liked as an additional name.<sup>19</sup> The basic difference between the baptismal name and the non-calendar name is quite simple. The baptismal name provided a personal name for the child and was conferred by a priest in the ceremony of christening. This name could not be altered. The non-calendar name was given privately without any ceremony, either by the parent, neighbour or the individual him/herself. Since baptismal names were compulsory and limited to one per person, the non-calendar names were many and varied.<sup>20</sup> They were not compulsory. Their use aided in the identification of a person among the increased number of homonymous bearers of the limited numbers of baptismal names.<sup>21</sup> The Ostromir Gospel (11th century) was the first Slavic text known to have recorded a second, non-calendar name, wherein the postscript reads: "v Krisčenii Iosif, a mirisky Ostromirū, i.e. 'in baptism Joseph, but in world /named/ Ostromir'."<sup>22</sup> It was these additional names which served as the initial step in the creation and evolution of future family names. Among the nobility, patronymics or given names played an important role in the formation of surnames which were later copied by the common people. E.C. Smith remarks:

the development of surnames and their universal use throughout the world followed commerce. The countries and parts of countries where many were engaged in trade were the first to use surnames. Agricultural districts, where man was tied to the soil to make his living, had a smaller population where the need for more exact identification was not so pressing and were, consequently, the last place to acquire universal family names.<sup>23</sup>

Within time, among the Eastern Slavs, as the population increased and shifted to specific settlements, commerce with Byzantium and other eastern and western countries expanded. Nomenclature began to assume a lasting base in an effort to facilitate local government and administration, to individualize people and aid in legal transactions.

Specifically, while trade relations were always close between Byzantium and Kyjiv in the 10th-12th centuries, it is highly probable that wealthy merchant families settled and/or lived in Kyjiv. In business and property transactions with local and foreign merchants, some type of identification had to be used. Members of a wealthy merchant family who were to inherit property or goods upon the death of the father, had to provide properly documented evidence of heredity.<sup>24</sup> The need for family names was also immediate among many inhabitants of villages or towns who belonged to organized unions or " cekhy" (guilds). Membership was conferred upon the payment of dues, thus a form of differentiation from neighbouring traders or businessmen was essential.<sup>25</sup> It is highly probable that many family names in the 10th-12th centuries reflected exactly upon the trade or occupation of the individual who bore the additional name. In this way a considerable number of family names have passed through the generations until today. Unfortunately, not all were documented and many vanished from use.

By summarizing the facts given above, the following could be deduced:

- 1) Pre-Christian and post-Christian anthroponymy among the Slavs was, like that of other Indo-European peoples, meaningful and formally differentiated.<sup>26</sup>

2) Its basic function was to individualize one person from another in society.<sup>27</sup>

3) With the expansion of Christianity, many old Slavic names underwent changes, or became extinct after the Judeo-Greek-Latin name system was introduced, or they simply became bynames.

4) The sources of Slavic anthroponymy are confined to written manuscripts, old prints, grafitti, inscriptions, and other similar documents.<sup>28</sup>

5) The main difficulty in semantic interpretation of old Slavic personal names is the absence of historical documentation with regard to the circumstances in which names were created and given.<sup>29</sup>

6) When the need arose to individualize people with similar personal names, trades or characteristics, another form -- the additional, byname or nickname was created. With time,

Chapter II

Types of Ukrainian Family Names

Ukrainian anthroponymic surnames developed in a fashion similar to that of all Indo-European surnames.<sup>1</sup> They represented the individual characteristics of a person inherited from ancestors who identified themselves by their 1) patronymic or matronymic relationship, 2) descriptive characteristics, 3) occupation, trade or profession and 4) place of residence.<sup>2</sup> Foreign elements in Ukrainian surnames resulted from political, cultural and economic circumstances in history.<sup>3</sup>

If all Ukrainian family names were able to be easily fit into the aforementioned categories, they would be both uniform and clear. Unfortunately, when surnames are examined carefully, it is obvious that many rest on the border line between two categories or overlap them.<sup>4</sup> Many occupational surnames have patronymic suffixes, toponyms exist in reference to flora and fauna; while surnames denoting descriptive characteristics could be considered toponyms, or they may denote nationality or place of domicile.

In spite of rules, it is impossible to fit all surnames into strict and definite sets of classifications. The exceptions, corruptions and variation in spelling make for certain duplication in meaning. The neat pattern of surname classification is marred by odd and unusual names which cannot be identified with certainty.

A. Surnames of Relationship

Surnames of relationship constitute the largest group in Ukrainian nomenclature.<sup>1</sup> They are divided into two distinct types -- patronymics, derived from the father's name, and matronymics, derived from the mother's name.<sup>2</sup>

1) Patronymic Surnames

The most common suffixes used among the early Kyjivan princes (X-XIc.), by the nobility to identify their family relationships were: -ich/ych; -ovich/ovych; -evich/evych; -ov/yev. These were added to the proper or baptismal name of the father, implying "son of a man from whom the name was derived." From Povest' vremennykh let' Laurentian Text (The Primary Chronicle), the following translations of patronymic surnames support the fact of their use:

"Vladimir, son of Yaroslav attacked the people of Yam' and conquered them."<sup>3</sup>

"Yaroslav, the son of Yaropolk fled from Kiev on October ..."<sup>4</sup>

Hursky is of the opinion that at that time, an individual was identified by three names -- his own, his father's and his paternal grandfather's. Since the third name applied to all members of the family, it developed into a permanent patronym.<sup>6</sup>

The most typical and widely used Ukrainian patronymic suffix, not found in any other Slavic language, is -enko.<sup>7</sup> According to O.B. Tkachenko, its origin goes back to the second half of the twelfth century, when the reduced vowels ü and i already disappeared. Morphologically, the format -enko consists of two suffixes, -en, denoting children and young of animals ("deten"- child), while k suggests diminutiveness, and the final -o is an ending. Consequentially, -enko indicates "son of," a name for children after one of their parents.<sup>8</sup>

First recorded in 1480 (Poslaly esmo dvoranyna nashoho Sen'ka Polozenka) (we have sent our nobleman Sen'ko Polozenko), this suffix spread rapidly in all directions from its original home between Kyjiv and Cherkasy.<sup>9</sup> This suffix had supplanted the earlier suffix -enok, typical for the region of Kyjiv, in the middle of the 16th century.<sup>10</sup> The Cossack Registers of the 17th century bear witness to the wide popularity of the suffix -enko.<sup>11</sup> The 1770 census of married Cossacks in the region of Protovchanske list 155 persons out of the 242 families in the register with surnames ending in -enko.<sup>12</sup>

A high percentage of Ukrainian surnames with the suffix -enko has remained in use in the central Ukraine since the 17th century.<sup>13</sup> They were not widespread in the western parts of the Ukraine (Halychyna, Volyn'), where the suffixes -uk/yuk and -s'kyj, -c'kyj and -z'kyj unquestionably prevailed.

The suffix -enko, even though of patronymic origin, may be applied not only to baptismal names of the father, but also to occupational, ethnic and place names.<sup>14</sup>

The suffixes -uk/yuk/chuk are characteristic of the western part of the Ukraine.<sup>15</sup> These suffixes are used to designate adolescents, relationship of son to father, or an apprentice to his master. Koval'chuk -- "son of the blacksmith"; Volynchuk -- "son of one from Volynya"; Stepanyuk -- "son of Stepan." Almost all surnames ending in the suffix -enko, may be replaced by any of the three mentioned suffixes.<sup>16</sup> Nimchuk notes in his article "that patronymic surnames with these suffixes were not found in XV-XVI century documents."<sup>17</sup>

Ukrainian surnames with the suffixes -ich/ych; -evich/evych; -ovich/ovych; are the oldest hereditary family names, since they developed from patronymics used first by early Kievan princes.<sup>18</sup>

Hursky states that these suffixes derived from Old Church Slavic itshtō, which was employed to describe young people. These suffixes indicate "son of," while -ych is employed to describe the male young of animals.<sup>19</sup>

Family surnames with the above mentioned suffixes predominate in documents of Rozov's "Ukrajins'ki hramoty" of 1341-1459. Today they are found predominantly in the western Ukraine.<sup>20</sup> The reason for their rarity in the eastern Ukraine may be explained by the tendency of the Russian empire under Catherine II: "that individuals of the first five grades of Civil Service should use their patronymic with the suffix -ich, and sixth and eighth grades only with -ov/ev as semi patronymics."<sup>21</sup> (From E.P. Karnovych, Rodovye prozvaniya i tytuly v Rosii i slyaniye inozemtsev s russkimi, 1886). N.F. Sumcov<sup>22</sup> states that Ukrainians required special permission for use of family names in -ich/ych. This explains their decrease and the gradual increase in suffixes -ov/ev.

Family surnames with the suffixes -ak/yak designate a man according to his ethnic derivation, profession or act:<sup>23</sup> Skrypak -- "violinist"; Spivak -- "singer"; Antonyak -- "Anthony."

Surnames ending with the suffixes -iv/yiv denote possession:<sup>24</sup> Petriv -- "belong to Petro" or "Peter's son";

Pavliv -- "belong to Pavlo" or "Pavlo's son."

To conclude this chapter, it is evident from the examples cited that patronymic suffixes constitute a major category important to Ukrainian surname formation. Their use dates back to Kyjivan Rus' when the first chronicles, hramoty and business transactions were being recorded.

According to Red'ko, the most widely used baptismal names in the formation of patronymics are: Fedir, Yakiv, Mykhalylo, Kryhorij, Stepan and Semen.<sup>25</sup> These baptismal names with their diminutive and augmentative forms are known from the 17th century documents.

Since the patronymic surnames became popular among the common people, it is assumed that the patronymic style which originated with princes and nobles, was copied by the general population.<sup>26</sup>

2) Matronymic Surnames

Matronymic surnames, derived from the mother's full baptismal name, are less common in Ukrainian nomenclature than patronymics,<sup>1</sup> however, they do exist in limited numbers. The introduction of women's baptismal names occurred through the medium of the Church Slavonic language with the acceptance of Christianity.

Since the majority of baptismal names ended in the suffix -a/ya (Sofiya, Olena, Mariya), the corresponding matronymic surname took on the suffixes -yn and -yshyn, meaning "son of" or "daughter of" Sofiya, Mariya or Olena (Sofiyishyn, Marynyn, Olenchyn).<sup>2</sup> Matronymic surnames performed the same function as patronymic surnames in the identification of a person. Specifically, the matronymic surname: 1) indicated a child born out of wedlock, as one of the oldest examples indicates: "Oleg Nastasjič (1187) was the son of the Prince Jaroslav of Halic and his mistress Nastas'ja,"<sup>3</sup> 2) legitimate, fatherless child where the mother was solely responsible for the upkeep of the household while the father worked elsewhere;<sup>4</sup> 3) if a woman of higher status married below her rank.<sup>5</sup> It is possible that matronymic surnames were also used in mockery for mama's boys. This fact cannot be substantiated accurately, however, the probability of its validity is quite high.

Matronymic surnames were usually derived from four basic sources: 1) popular baptismal names of women -- Malanka - Malanchyn; Olena - Olenchyn; Marusya - Marusyn;<sup>6</sup> 2) from occupational names of either the husband or the wife herself -- Pekaryshyn - "son of Pekarka";<sup>7</sup> 3) local names -- Berezhan - Berezhany;<sup>8</sup> 4) andronymic name of the wife which in itself was acquired from the husband's personal name by means of the suffix -ykha.<sup>9</sup> It was believed that the wife was the husband's property, while the children belonged to the mother. Thus matronymic surnames were only a transitional process leading to patronymics. Wives of husbands named Pavlo, Petro and Marko were known as Pavlykha, Petrykha and Marchykha, while their children were called Pavlyshyn, Petryshyn and Marchyshyn.<sup>10</sup>

B. Occupation, Trade and Profession

When dealing with surnames of occupation, trade and profession, the question arises whether the person who bore the original family name really practised the occupation, trade or profession that the surname suggests, or if this was only the case during a certain period, or under certain circumstances in his/her life. It is not completely possible to resolve this problem satisfactorily through insufficient material dating back to the early period of Kyjivan history, when family names were being devised among the merchant and professional classes (in order to differentiate individuals performing similar tasks).<sup>1</sup> It is, however, possible and even probable that people generally had a surname conforming with their occupation, trade or profession.<sup>2</sup> It is also probable that an individual may have possessed a family name as a nickname, because he/she had been seen performing something that was associated with or incidental to his/her profession, trade or occupation.<sup>3</sup> Someone seen mending his own boots might have been named "Svec'" (shoemaker), while someone else who spoke eloquently like a priest might have been named "Pip" (priest).

It is probable that many artisans manufactured not only artifacts that their family name suggested at that time.<sup>4</sup> A trade-name might have been taken from that of the articles produced by the individual. Thus the "Koval'" (blacksmith) produced not only horseshoes, but also related objects in metal, such as "Cvyakh" (nail), or "Nizh" (knife).

An interesting characteristic concerning Ukrainian surnames of occupation, trade and profession is the specialization found within one specific category, namely agriculture.<sup>5</sup> The most probable explanation for this phenomenon relates to the fact that the Ukraine, from the earliest times until today, has been an agricultural country.<sup>6</sup>

There are also a certain number of Ukrainian surnames which indicate that a remote ancestor was an official of the church, who performed sacerdotal functions.<sup>7</sup> The church played an important role in the daily life of the Ukrainian people. It served as a centre for education, cultural and social life.<sup>8</sup> Surnames which have been retained until the present day denoting the lay and clerical positions of ancestors are: "Dyak" (deacon); "Pip" (priest); "Hrabar" undertaker<sup>9</sup> and others. Related surnames denoting "Anhel" (angel), "Apostol" (apostle), and "Spas" (saviour) were probably adopted from miracle and morality plays or holiday revels.<sup>9</sup>

Surnames of occupation, trade and profession are predominant in all languages. However, it is in the Ukrainian language that the patronymic and matronymic suffixes provide a wider diversification (Tkach - Tkachuk - Tkachenko - Tkachyk - Tkachyshyn).<sup>10</sup>

Examples of representative categories of Ukrainian surnames of occupation, trade and profession are:

1. Administration - "Voyevoda" (administrator of Ukrainian province), "Kozak" (Cossack).
2. Social Status - "Bahach" (rich man), "Boyar" (nobleman),

- "Muzhyk" (peasant).
3. Army/Military - "Het'man" (Cossack leader), "Pysar" (secretary), "Pushkar" (gunner).
  4. Business:
    - a) trade - "Pyvovar" (brewer), "Tkach" (weaver), "Kushnir" (furrier).
    - b) merchant - "Kramar" (merchant), "Kupec'" (buyer).
    - c) husbandry - "Svynar" (swineherd).
    - d) fishing - "Rybak" (fisherman).
    - e) other trades - "Viznyk" (carter), "Mel'nyk" (miller), "Pekar" (baker).
  5. Organizational Work - "Pip" (priest), "Starosta" (village elder).
  6. Court life - "Skomorokh" (jester), "Kucher" (coachman), "Dvorak" (esquire).
  7. Education - "Dudar" (player on the instrument duda), "Spivak" (singer).
  8. Ecclesiastical - "Dyak" (deacon), "Hrabar" (undertaker).
  9. Entertainment - "Banduryst" (player of the folk instrument, the bandura).

Many Ukrainian family names belonging to the above categories have become obsolete. On the basis of the varieties and numbers that are in use today, they reflect well upon society as it existed centuries ago in Kyjivan Rus,<sup>11</sup> but best of all on the society of the 16th-17th centuries (the Cossack period), when the majority of surnames of occupation, trade and profession were being stabilized and becoming hereditary.<sup>12</sup>

C. Descriptive Surnames

The term nickname, an eke-name is an elastic term which is used for a name or description which is added or substituted for a proper name of a person.<sup>1</sup> This term does not cover pet-names or diminutives of personal names, and is applicable equally to those descriptions which refer to a particular person and to those which have become family names.<sup>2</sup> These nicknames, called "prizvys'ka," comprise the second largest group among Ukrainian surnames.<sup>3</sup> They are identified either with a noun or an adjective, and may denote physical or moral characteristics of the founder of a family.<sup>4</sup>

Nicknames could be witty and ingenious or derogatory and gross. They arise spontaneously from some fortuitous chance.<sup>5</sup> Those which particularly persist are the ones which the unfortunate recipient, no matter how strong his objections, has no option but to endure. Nicknames are not usually given deliberately as names, but suddenly blossom forth in jest, derision and/or anger, and the circumstances of their inception, if known, are soon forgotten.<sup>6</sup>

Offensive nicknames may be real tokens of affection or friendship, even though they are not so intended to be. The person who answers to them does not necessarily feel hurt or insulted. Crude and vulgar nicknames are used more often among the lower classes of society,<sup>7</sup> while nicknames of princes and rulers are almost never hereditary.<sup>8</sup>

Since a large number of surnames are derived from nicknames, primary attention shall be given to the most common ones. Any classification of Ukrainian surnames created from descriptive characteristics of a person must be broad and general, as comprehensive treatment of each is impossible if endless repetition and cross references are to be avoided.

or unusual formation or structure of the body:<sup>9</sup> Holova - "head"; Oko - "eye"; Ruka - "hand."

Size called attention to the physical strength and stature of the individual:<sup>10</sup> Velykyj - "the big one"; Hrubbyj - "the fat one"; Malyj - "the small one."

Surnames by reference to colour are used today and were very popular with our ancestors in reference to the coloring of a family or an individual:<sup>11</sup> Chornyyj - "the black, dark one"; Rudyj - "the red-haired one"; Bilyj - "the white one."

b) Moral/Mental Characteristics

There are many Ukrainian surnames that denote both moral and mental characteristics of the name's original owner. Naturally, some characteristics are delicate, while others are either ironic or very coarse:<sup>12</sup> Dobryj - "the good one"; Laskavyj - "the kind one"; Bystryj - "the sharp one"; Linyvyj - "the lazy one." Poturnak - renegade, Ukrainian who adopted Turkish manners, customs and faith.

From admiration or respect felt for wise and learned men, qualities manifested themselves in family names:<sup>13</sup> Rozumnyj - "the intelligent one"; Mudryj - "the smart one." Along with admirable qualities existed unattractive, crude connotations which are still used today: Burlak - "vagabond, lazy one"; Kapusta - "foolish individual"; Kordupel' - "the small one" and many others.

A certain number of Ukrainian surnames arose from nicknames applied to men with either moral or physical mannerisms of a prince, Cossack or ecclesiastic:<sup>14</sup> Knyaz' - "prince"; Kozak - "Cossack"; Pop - "Priest"; or of military rank: Otaman - "leader of Cossacks."

There were no qualms about naming a child a bastard, and Ukrainian nomenclature has a number of surnames denoting this situation:<sup>15</sup> Nayda - "foundling"; Levyc'kyj - "the left one, illegitimate one"; Moskalyk - "child en passant, fathered by Moskal'."

2. Flora/Fauna

Among other popular surnames belonging to this category are those derived from flora and fauna. Although the origin of the description or surname is certain, more than one possible meaning may be applied to explain why surnames of this type were utilized: 1) perhaps an individual manifested a real or fancied resemblance to the flora/fauna in question;<sup>16</sup> 2) perhaps an individual received a nickname from an incident in the history of the family, the origin of which is lost; 3) perhaps the name had to do with keeping and selling of either flora or fauna;<sup>17</sup> 4) perhaps surnames of this type were derived from locations so called because of the presence of specific flora or fauna;<sup>18</sup> 5) perhaps an individual emanated an odour similar to the fauna. For example: Zhuk - "beetle"; Vedmid' - "bear"; Lys - "fox"; Bul'ba - "potato"; Dub - "oak tree."

These surnames take on both the matronymic and patronymic surname suffixes.

3. Humorous/abstract/food/verbs/phrase surnames

In peasant communities nicknames given to people were very colourful and different. They were derived from household implements, food, humorous or religious events, peculiar acts and abstract terms.<sup>19</sup>

Humorous surnames derived from food usually denoted, a person's strange fondness for that specific food, or he was perhaps known for making the best Syr - "cheese," Khlib - "bread," or Yushka - "broth."

Peculiar compound or phrase names (verb/noun) or simply verb surnames, referred to some action that an individual had performed either seriously or in jest:<sup>20</sup> Vertyporokh - "twist the wind"; Syroyid - "cheese eater"; Hukalo - hukaty: "to cause noise"; hryzlo - hryzty: "to gnaw, to chew" and others.

From early mystery and morality plays, abstract virtues and terms were personified by actors who played the parts.<sup>21</sup> Dilo - "deed"; Holod - "hunger"; Dobrota - "goodness"; Anhel - "angel"; Pastukh - "shepherd" and others.

Surnames from numerals and calendar names were usually given to a child born on a specific day, month or festival: Pervak - "the first born"; Tretyak - "the third one"; Odynec' - "the single one"; Ponедилок - "Monday"; Praznyk - "feast day."<sup>22</sup>

Many nicknames in this category could be explained by guesswork, while others could be translated literally and interpreted in many diverse ways, depending on the circumstances involved in obtaining such surnames. These circumstances are not always clear.

Surnames with disagreeable meanings tend to become obsolete or altered in spelling so as to be unrecognizable. Nevertheless, the number of such Ukrainian surnames is limitless and remains in common use among the general population.

D. Toponyms

Toponym is a convenient term used by onomatologists for names derived from a particular locality or residence. At the time when there were no hereditary surnames, it was a common practice to name people after the place from which they came, lived in or were born in.<sup>1</sup> Ukrainian surnames acquired from toponyms developed under the following sets of circumstances: 1) A man lived or worked in, on or near some natural topographical formation or landscape feature;<sup>2</sup> 2) a man formerly lived in or near a certain village, town, hamlet or river (hydronym), and thus acquired a reputation of being from that place;<sup>3</sup> 3) a man was of noble birth and his family owned a village or manor.<sup>4</sup>

The majority of Ukrainian toponymic surnames are either topographical -- from general domiciles and residences, or from specific populated sites.<sup>5</sup> They are formed by the following suffixes: -s'kyj, -c'kyj, -z'kyj, -uk(yuk, -ak(yak) and -c', also using the prefixes za (behind), pid (under), na (on) and nad (above).<sup>6</sup>

1) Topographical Surnames

Topographical surnames are characterized by their reference to the environment in which a person dwelt. The most popular landscape features denoted in surnames come from hills, forests, meadows and rivers. Physical features or objects in the landscape suffice to distinguish one family from another,<sup>7</sup> for example: Pidhirnyj - "dweller under the hill"; Zalisnyj - "dweller behind or on the edge of the forest"; Piddubnyj - "dweller under the oak tree"; Mostovyj - "dweller near a bridge"; Potichnyj - "dweller near a creek."

Residents near or on land which produced certain crops also acquired surnames accordingly:<sup>8</sup> Yablons'kyj - "one living near an apple tree"; Kalyns'kyj - "one living near a guelder-rose"; Hrechka - "buckwheat"; Khmil - "hops."

Many surnames are derived from places of residence of certain fauna:<sup>9</sup> Chaykivs'kyj - "place of seagulls."

Early history documents the Eastern Slavs as an agricultural people, who did not dwell in large cities as we recognize them today. For this reason, the questions of identity and nationality of local and foreign intruders into the territory was a crucial matter.<sup>10</sup> Surnames: Volynyak - "one from the region of Volyn'"; or Poltavec' - "one from Poltava region" sufficed to identify local residents. Foreigners were distinguished by denoting their nationality, however, it was probably difficult to decipher whether the name denoted the place of origin of the individual or a mere term or nickname applied to somebody who visited a foreign country and bored friends with his continuous tales of adventure. Surnames typical of this sub-category denote either nationality or general place of residence:<sup>11</sup> Nimec' - "foreigner, German"; Shved - "Swede"; Polyak - "Pole"; Turok - "Turk."

2) Specific Geographic Locations

Ukrainian surnames derived from specific geographic locations include cities, villages, towns, hamlets<sup>12</sup> and rivers (hydronyms). For example: Samborak - "one from the city Sambir"; Kyyan - "one from the city Kyjiv"; Bachyns'kyj - "one from the village Bachyna"; Dniprovs'kyj - "one living near the river Dnipro." These surnames were created by reason of former residence, birth or ownership of the specific settlement.

Complete accuracy in tracing surnames from toponyms is quite difficult, because many of the original villages and towns have been extinct for years, others have been renamed, while still others have kept their former spelling, but the place of residence has altered its original name.<sup>13</sup>

A considerable number of baptismal names formed toponyms, which in turn formed family surnames.<sup>14</sup> For example: Adamovs'kyj - "Adam's settlement"; Ivanivs'kyj - "Ivan's settlement"; Myroslavs'kyj - "Myroslav's settlement."

Ukrainian surnames with adjective endings in s'kyj, c'kyj and z'kyj are undoubtedly derived from place names. As people moved from one place of residence to another, they brought with them their surnames, which served to identify them.<sup>15</sup>

Such surnames are extremely popular in the western part of the Ukraine. According to Y.K. Red'ko, they reach 75% of all surnames in the regions of Drohobych, L'viv, Ternopil and Stanislav.<sup>16</sup>

In the Ukraine surnames derived from the aforementioned suffixes belonged to the wealthy nobility and provided the old stock of Ukrainian nomenclature. In the 19th-20th centuries, surnames typical of this category were found to belong to many Ukrainian people from all strata of society. The probable explanation for this could stem from: 1) some families descended from the nobility (shlyakhta), but lost their titles, or 2) the common people wished to imitate noble families, to denote noble birth for themselves.

A. de Vincenz claims that in the Carpathian Mountains, no Ukrainian surnames with toponymic suffixes were found, except for two isolated examples in villages accessible to foreign influence.<sup>17</sup>

E. Non-Ukrainian Elements

In every language, loan or foreign words comprise a certain percentage of the vocabulary. Naturally, surnames are among the foreign loan words naturalized into the Ukrainian language.

How and when certain foreign elements became incorporated into the Ukrainian anthroponymy, is closely related to the historical and political evolution of the Ukraine. The foreign elements which were naturalized into the Ukrainian nomenclature were either adaptive or non-adaptive to the surname patterns. They were introduced either voluntarily or involuntarily, depending upon the cultural and political situation in the country itself.

The growth of civilization in the East-Slavic area in the tenth century, namely, Kyjivan Rus' was intimately connected with the external relations of its polity. At the beginning of the historical period, the language of the Slavs was supplemented with loan words and names from varied and distinct sources.<sup>1</sup>

Loan words and names from Scandinavia came directly to Kyjiv with the early princes.<sup>2</sup> Many of these words and names had been lost when the Scandinavians were Slavicized. However, a number of old personal names exist to this very day. For example: Ihor - Ingvar; Oleh - Helgi, Ol'ha - Helga.

Greek loan words and names arrived into Kyjivan Rus' through both the intermediary of Old Church Slavonic and the Bulgarian languages<sup>3</sup> which were used until Kyjiv was sacked by the Tatars (Mongols) in the 13th century, and through direct contact with Byzantium. The Greek vocabulary adapted by the Kyjivan Slavs included baptismal names, terminology of the Church, and some words of the secular culture.<sup>4</sup> For example: Olena - Helena; Oleksander - Alexandros; ladan - ladanos.

A number of loan words and names entered Old Church Slavonic through Latin, for example: pastyr: Lat. pastor: "shepherd."<sup>5</sup>

Contacts -- warlike or peaceful -- between the Turkic and Kyjivan people, began as early as the 10th century.<sup>6</sup> It was with the initial invasion of the Kyjivan

State under Batu Khan (1237-40) that Kyjiv lost its significance as a religious and cultural center. Under the Tatar yoke, much foreign, Tatar vocabulary entered the Ukrainian language and nomenclature.<sup>7</sup> This process continued until the Tatars left the Ukrainian territories.

N.F. Sumcov is of the opinion that the close relations between the Tatars and the Ukrainian people resulted in an extensive foreign vocabulary which entered Ukrainian nomenclature. He concedes the fact that even among the wealthier noble families in the 16th century, there were Christianized Tatars.<sup>8</sup> In Cossack registers of the 16th-17th centuries, many surnames are found to be of both Turkic and Tatar origin. Special mention is made of the Cossack Het'man Bayun' (1637) as being the son of a baptized Turk.<sup>9</sup>

In the 14th century the dynastic union of Poland and Lithuania (1386) marked the beginnings of gradual Polonization of Lithuania proper, and the extension of Polish influence into territories known today as the western Ukraine. As a result of this political move, Ukrainian and Byelorussian surnames today display common similarities.<sup>10</sup>

In the second half of the 17th century, the Ukraine declined both politically and culturally. It was forced to share its fate with Poland, Russia and later the Austro-Hungarian Empire. More specifically, the political and economic circumstances of that time forced the Ukrainian people into close contact with their neighbours, foreign colonizers and enemies. These mixed contacts with other language groups manifested themselves in the local vocabulary and surnames.

Involuntary naturalization of Russian elements into Ukrainian anthroponomy prevailed in the second half of the 18th century, when the tsarist government began expanding its influence in the central Ukraine. The Ukrainian language was banned from schools, Ukrainian periodicals were suppressed, and the general population was becoming illiterate.<sup>11</sup>

Censors, governments administrators and military officers were mostly Russian, many of whom were themselves poorly educated. When the registration of Ukrainian family names was necessary, it was done in such a way to render a Ukrainian family in a deformed or completely Russianized form. The Russianization of Ukrainian family names was a simple matter, since the nations shared the Cyrillic alphabet.<sup>12</sup> The illiterate people did not recognize errors in transcription, and therefore could not, or dared not correct them. Examples of such modifications: Ivanovych - Ivanov; Pavlovych - Pavlov; and others. The stem of the original surname was retained, while the Russian suffix was added.

N.F. Sumcov states that many Ukrainian family names ending in -ych, -evych and -ovych became extinct or diminished in some areas of the eastern Ukraine. He claims that very few families were allowed to continue using these suffixes without special consent from the Russian government. This supports the gradual increase in Ukrainian family names with the suffixes -ev and -ov.<sup>13</sup>

A similar process of forced Polonization of Ukrainian surnames occurred in Ukrainian territories under Polish domination.

The trend to voluntarily Polonize or Russify Ukrainian family names occurred generally among the elite of Ukrainian society. This trend was popular for the gentry and for noble families who wished to enjoy prestige, secure civil service positions, or government appointments. Many young students wishing to enter institutions of higher learning and semi-naries, took up the Roman rite and altered their surnames into Polish-sounding ones.<sup>14</sup> In this way the Ukrainian surname Molochnyj changed to Galatovs'kyj, Petrushenko changed to Piotrkovs'kyj.<sup>14</sup>

There was a continuous interchange among the surnames of Ukrainian, Polish and Russian origin. It is sometimes difficult to distinguish between them as regards surnames ending in the suffixes -s'kyj and -ovych/-evych, which were borne by both Ukrainians and Poles.<sup>15</sup>

German surnames are particularly common both in the Eastern and Western Ukraine. These are reasons why this is so: 1) Individual immigration of German scholars, merchants, musicians, artists and chemists during the 18th and 19th centuries, 2) the existence of German rural settlements and the German gentry favoured both by Tsar Peter of Russia<sup>16</sup>

and later by Catherine II.

French elements in Ukrainian surnames, which are quite rare, descend mainly from French emigrés from the Revolution of 1789, or from Napoleonic prisoners of war <sup>in UKRAINE.</sup> who remained and/or settled down. These surnames were rarely assimilated, however their transcription into the Cyrillic alphabet may conceal their origin (Dumas, Sharlemagn').<sup>17</sup>

In summation, the following facts could be inferred:

1. A large number of surnames borne by Ukrainians derive from foreign names or foreign words.
2. The foreign elements admitted into Ukrainian namelore occurred voluntarily and involuntarily, influenced by the political and cultural events of history.
3. From examples in this thesis, the "naturalized" foreign elements were either adaptive or non-adaptive to the Ukrainian surname pattern. The adapted elements derived from foreign or Slavic words (through etymological and orthographical considerations) took on the Ukrainian surname suffix, and fitted well into a pattern. The non-adaptive elements, either of Slavic or of foreign origin, because of their form, were not able to fit into the Ukrainian surname pattern. Such surnames would simply be transcribed into the Cyrillic alphabet, exactly as possible from the original, and remained suffixless nouns which were not declinable (Shvab, Shmit). Surnames of this type cannot be considered Ukrainian, even though the owners who bear them speak only Ukrainian.

Ukrainian Surnames of Dubious or Uncertain Origin

There are some Ukrainian surnames of dubious or uncertain origin. An in depth analysis into these surnames is necessary. For the purpose of this thesis, examples only have been excerpted and listed in the fifth chapter.

Azyra, Chauk, Defir, Gamola, Haca, Zhun'and others.

Chapter III

Documentation of Ukrainian Family Surnames

The documentation of family names took place at different times in every country.<sup>1</sup> The period of exact documentation of early Ukrainian surnames is still disputed by scholars. M.L. Khudash<sup>2</sup> presents three limited periods of fixation by different onomatologists. Some of them state that Ukrainian surnames were created and fixed in oral traditions somewhere in the 14th-15th centuries, others claim that Ukrainian surnames were formed in the 17th-18th centuries, but the general opinion, which is the most convincing, confirms that the process of Ukrainian surname stabilization occurred at the end of the 18th century and the beginning of the 19th.<sup>3</sup>

Ukrainian surnames were not fixed for all strata of society at the same time.<sup>4</sup> The nobility (Shlyakhta), Cossack Starshyna, wealthy merchants and clergy possessed stable family names recorded in early hramoty, manuscripts, registers of cities and towns, military registers and legal documents from the beginning of their social origin.<sup>5</sup> Some authentic examples of early recorded 'prozvyshcha' which developed into surnames at a later date.

It is evident from the cited examples that the use of surnames was popular and did not follow any standard rules or regulations.<sup>9</sup> In spite of the fact that surnames were being recorded in documents, there existed a distinct chaos in detailed transcription of these documents. People were listed sometimes by their first names, in certain documents according to their fathers' names, in others by their baptismal names, and in still others by reference to the mother. In the list of fugitives from the city of Luhin, the following was entered in the city register of Zhytomyr (1651-1652):

Z miasta Źuhin u poddani precz poszli:
Marko, Sherhej, Kosacz, Artuszenia,
Ždan, Stefan Prima, Charko Rybczenia ...
Michalec, Trochim, Czerednik ..., Iwan
Kirykow zięc ..., Zilkowa doczka ...,
Janczycha wdowa.<sup>10</sup>

From the city Luhin the following escaped from submission: Marko, Sherhej, Kosacz, Artuszenia, Ždan, Stefan Prima, Charko Rybczenia... Michalec, Trochim, Czerednik..., Ivan Kirykow..., Zilkó's daughter..., Jan's widow.

The chaos of recording names and the political turmoil in Ukrainian territories over the centuries did not warrant any specific need to stabilize surnames of local residents until the 18th-19th centuries.

Cossack registers from the 17th century provide valuable material in the study of Ukrainian surnames of that time.<sup>11</sup> In the Cossack register dated 1649, after the treaty of Zboriv between Het'man Bohdan Khmel'nyc'kyj and the Polish king Jan Kazimir, lists of Cossack registers are enumerated. Examples of surnames support the fact that patronymic, occupational, toponymic and metaphorical surnames were in common use among the Cossacks, who came from all strata of society. Not all surnames listed in the register were hereditary. Many were of foreign origin, while still others were nicknames used only temporarily by both the Cossack officers and soldiers:<sup>12</sup>

When family names, nicknames and baptismal names were being recorded in early documents for the nobility, clergy and wealthy merchants, the common people transmitted their names orally from one generation to the next, perhaps even altering them when necessary.<sup>15</sup>

Ivan Franko, a prominent Ukrainian scholar in the 19th century, stated that the first official attempt to formally register Ukrainian family names took place in the second half of the 16th century, after the Treaty of Lublin, when Ukrainian territories became part of the Polish Crown lands.<sup>16</sup> This attempt in recording the population and its possessions proved unsuccessful because specific instructions of procedure were vaguely outlined to the censors, resulting in a heterogeneous collection of data.<sup>17</sup>

The first true attempt at documenting hereditary Ukrainian family names began within the Church.<sup>18</sup> The Metropolitan of Kyjiv, Petro Mohyla (1632-1647), ordered his clergy to record and keep parish registers of births, marriages and deaths, since the majority of the peasantry was illiterate. Not only were baptismal names to be recorded in these records, but family names (surnames) used by the individual.<sup>19</sup> The Synod of the Kyjivan clergy, in support of Metropolitan Petro Mohyla's Ritual (Trebnyk) ordered "each priest to have a parish register in his church"<sup>20</sup> on December 16, 1642.

A similar regulation in the Western Ukraine (Halychyna) was issued by Bishop Osyp Shumlyans'kyj, who in 1687 published his book Metryka<sup>21</sup> (Parish Register), introducing the rural clergy to procedures involved in the administration of the parish office.

Should the necessity arise to inquire who was born on what day, month and year, who performed the baptism and who were the god-parents, with whom somebody was related in blood and spirit or for whom responsibility was taken, in examining the parish register, these questions may easily be answered. Should anyone project indecent lies (as it so happens in the world) let him go to the parish register, and there everything could be found.<sup>22</sup>

Recalling earlier times, Shumlyans'kyj writes:

It is true, that before this parish register had been neglected in our Rus', it is understandable because in that time the Church suffered persecutions, so not only one was not able to record anything into the register, but had to flee from the Church, and the parish registers were lost. The deceased Metropolitan of Kyjiv, Petro Mohyla, considering the spiritual rules and Church services, saw exactly that our Ruthenian clergy needs instruction and explanation of the holy sacraments and also the parish register. Therefore, on December 16, 1642 in the Metropolitan Cathedral of St. Sophia in Kyjiv, a synod of the clergy was held, during which time everything written in the Great Ritual was confirmed, accepted and ordered. That is, "every priest have a parish register in his church."<sup>23</sup>

Unfortunately, the parish records kept by the rural clergy proved useless in the study of types and development of Ukrainian surnames, since the clergy recorded into them only the baptismal names of their congregation, totally ignoring family names (surnames).<sup>24</sup> This occurrence may be explained by the fact that baptisms and marriage ceremonies were performed through use of Christian names alone. Even today, the Church does not recognize surnames in ceremonies, but only in documents.

The exception was the Trans-Carpathian Ukraine, where under the laws of the Austrian Empire and the Hungarian

Kingdom Ukrainian surnames were recorded in Ukrainian parishes from the end of the 17th century.<sup>25</sup>

In the other Ukrainian regions it was only at the end of the 18th century that political circumstances provided a means for the peasantry to legally stabilize their full names and hereditary family names. In Halychyna, which in 1772 became part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the surnames of all classes of society were recorded from that year.<sup>26</sup>

A decree issued by Emperor Francis I on February 21, 1805, made it compulsory for all residents of Halychyna to have surnames.<sup>27</sup> This followed the pattern established by Emperor Joseph II, who on July 23, 1787 made it necessary for Jewish residents of Halychyna to have surnames.<sup>28</sup>

To prevent any name changing among the populace, on June 5, 1826 another decree was issued which prohibited any surname alteration. Had it occurred, the individual was subject to punishment. These decrees served well in aiding the stabilization of Ukrainian surnames in the Western Ukraine.<sup>29</sup>

Similar events occurred in those lands under the hegemony of the Russian Empire, specifically the Eastern Ukraine. Free farmers lost their surnames in 1783, when Empress Catherine II fixed the status of serfdom in the Ukraine.<sup>30</sup> When this took place, the peasantry became the property of the Russian gentry. As villages were bought and sold, names and family names of the people appeared in numerous transactions.

Since the status of serfs was meager, they were conscripted into the military. Both in the Austro-Hungarian Empire and in the Russian Empire, conscription resulted in exact documentation of Ukrainian family names into military registers.<sup>31</sup> Should a serf or peasant not possess a proper family name, an appropriate one was supplied. In this way, many Ukrainian surnames had dubious, humorous and even derogatory meanings. Still other surnames were distorted and misspelled according to the interpretation of the secretary who recorded them.<sup>32</sup>

Despite the need for name stabilization in the 18th-19th centuries, many Ukrainian family names underwent voluntary or involuntary orthographical, phonological and morphological<sup>33</sup> changes. The involuntary deformations may be accounted for by false recording of family names by the government officials, censors and military registrars who were specially appointed by the respective governments to register names and surnames in such a way as to stay in line with their country's policies.<sup>34</sup> Since the majority of the population was illiterate, it accepted without protest the innovations of deformation in legal documents. As these deformed surnames passed down through generations they became traditional and were not changed back into the original.<sup>35</sup>

These were the problems with surnames in the lower classes of Ukrainian society. The surnames of the upper classes -- nobility and gentry, were submitted to different modifications and transformations. Generally speaking, many Ukrainian noble surnames were polonized or russified through the centuries.

Voluntary polonization of Ukrainian noble family names began at the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries. Reasons for such occurrences were many. It was, however, in the civil service positions that the Poles favoured the Roman Catholic faith and polonized noble families. The clergy also latinized their surnames, and many future theologians entered Polish seminaries under newly polonized surnames.<sup>36</sup>

Ivan Vyshens'kyj, a prominent scholar in the 16 - 17 th. centuries attacked the Ukrainian nobility who altered their family names to the Polish style.<sup>37</sup> Unfortunately, this process was not curtailed and also occurred in Ukrainian territories under the hegemony of the Russian Empire, equally for personal and for political reasons.

In the Eastern Ukraine, the Tsar had the power to determine who used the patronymic suffixes -ych, -evych and -ovych. The motives behind this attitude are not clear.<sup>38</sup> It is known that Catherine II ordered that "individuals of the first five grades of Civil Service should use their patronymic with the suffix -ich, and the 6-8th. grades only with -ov, -ev as semi-patronymics." For this specific reason many Ukrainian surnames of the patronymic type disappeared or were russified.<sup>39</sup>

Chapter IV

Conclusions

In the processes of development and documentation of Ukrainian hereditary family names (surnames), the following conclusions may be drawn:

1. Family names were in common use first among the nobility and merchant classes, and were later copied by the lower strata of society -- peasants, servants and village dwellers.
2. Hereditary family names developed among the nobility and prominent merchant classes when the need arose to identify family heirs or complete legal transactions.
3. Prior to the 18th-19th centuries, the common people were identified by baptismal names and additional bynames or nicknames which were altered many times before being formally registered.
4. Early and later documented treaties, manuscripts and military registers reveal the variety and colour of family names of patronymic and matronymic origin, occupation, profession and trade, descriptive characteristics and toponyms.

5. When laws of codification and proper use of surnames were enforced in the 18th century, surnames were recorded in church registers, government and military registers.

6. As a result of the shaky political events in Ukrainian territories in the 16th-18th centuries, many Ukrainian family names were modified -- either polonized, russified, or completely changed.

7. Ukrainian surnames display great semantic variety in possessing a large number of common nouns and adjectives that are used with or without onomastic suffixes.

8. Ukrainian family names may be classified into the following categories, as presented in this thesis: a) surnames of relationship, b) descriptive characteristics, c) occupation, trade and profession, d) toponyms, e) non-Ukrainian elements and f) surnames with dubious elements.

Chapter V

Classification of Ukrainian Family Names in Canada

The classification of Ukrainian family name (surname) retentions contain over 2,500 items. They are listed under the following categories: 1) Surnames of relationship, 2) descriptive characteristics, 3) Occupational, trade and professional, 4) Toponyms, 5) Non-Ukrainian elements and 6) Dubious or Uncertain Origin.

All surnames are listed in an alphabetical order according to the English alphabet. Each entry contains: 1) the English transliterated form of the Ukrainian surname with accent, 2) the Cyrillic form of the surname with accent, 3) meaning of the surname with cross references (q.v.) made where necessary. This is essential, since a particular name may have more than one meaning.

All entries were excerpted from F. Bogdan's Dictionary of Ukrainian Surnames in Canada. The items listed under these headings are not exhaustive, as many additional surnames could supplement each individual category.

Chapter I

A. Canadianization

Canadianization refers to the social and cultural process involving the modification of attitudes and sentiments of an immigrant group, with its gradual incorporation into one of the two dominant cultural groups in Canada. It means literally, to render Canadian, to stamp with characteristics of the Canadian environment, to bring to a resemblance or conformity in culture with one of Canada's two major ethnic groups.<sup>1</sup>

The process of Canadianization occurs wherever contact and communication exist between any new immigrant group and the host culture. Certain degrees of Canadianization take place automatically in the normal adjustment of a new immigrant group to its new milieu, while occasionally it is delayed by ethnic segregation in large cities or isolated communities.<sup>2</sup>

The amount of acculturation, assimilation<sup>3</sup> and

<sup>3</sup> Assimilation is defined here in terms which are both external and subjective. External assimilation implies the immigrant's lesser distinguishability from members of the host group. Subjective assimilation denotes the immigrant's psychological identification with the host group.

and integration<sup>4</sup> depends greatly upon the external factors of the host environment and its relationship to the immigrant society.

While the Ukrainian immigrants were adjusting to the new cultural milieu, it was difficult for them to reproduce the Old World culture in Canada, as environmental factors forced modifications in life styles, traditions, customs, religion and language to the point that they were neither part of the Old World nor Canadian, but somewhere in between. It was in this situation that many profound changes occurred on the surface level of the Ukrainian language, but even more importantly, on Ukrainian surnames.

<sup>4</sup> Integration is understood in terms of fusion of the immigrant's culture with that of the host group.

B. Surname Changes

One of the greatest difficulties for the early Ukrainian immigrants to Canada was their lack of familiarity with the English language. It was through the process of direct contact with the English environment and constant exposure to the new language that many Ukrainian settlers began identifying with the receiving culture.

For immigrants identifying with representatives of the receiving society all three phases must come to play for identification to take place. The immigrant must first approve of the culture represented to him by the members of the host society, he must be willing to behave the way they do, and he must also experience satisfaction in doing so.<sup>1</sup>

As new patterns of thinking, acting and speaking became characteristic to the new immigrant, the process of identification with the new environment manifested itself in an adapted and altered vocabulary to express the needs and daily experiences of life. So too, surnames changed with the new life styles.

The process of name changing did not start in the host environment. It really began when the prospective Ukrainian immigrant first sought admittance to Canada, at which time the problem of rendering his name in the English language first arose.

Changes in surnames go on in all countries and at all times. They are effected largely by transliteration and translation.<sup>2</sup>

V.J. Kaye<sup>3</sup> in researching original ships' registers and naturalization certificates of the early Ukrainian pioneers, discovered many errors in spelling and transliteration of Ukrainian surnames by immigration authorities unfamiliar with the Slavic people, their language, culture and behaviour.<sup>4</sup>

Kaye claims that changes in spelling of Ukrainian names and surnames resulted through involuntary changes caused by external factors. Voluntary changes occurred only after Ukrainian immigrants had been exposed to the new environment for a longer period of time. We shall examine both types of changes individually.

Involuntary Changes

Involuntary surname changes could be characterized by exterior factors, not controlled by early Ukrainian immigrants, which involved the initial faulty spelling and distortion of names and surnames contained in early ships' registers, and later in naturalization records in Canada.<sup>5</sup> Criteria for involuntary name changes were many:

1. Ships' lists were prepared by pursers with barely legible handwriting and in various spellings, as they were unfamiliar with the Slavic way of writing surnames.<sup>6</sup>
2. Many names and surnames were entered upon oral inquiries, and since they were recorded by officials, they were often accepted by immigrants as correct renderings of their names.<sup>7</sup>
3. When names were transferred from passports to ships' lists, the given names used the Polish form of spelling, such as Jendrzej for Andrij, Jan instead of Ivan. This could be explained by the fact that Polish orthography was used on many original documents: "sz" for "sh"; "cz" for "ch";

"j" for "y."

4. In Canadian ports of entry, such as Halifax, every immigrant<sup>8</sup> received an "Inspection Card for Immigration Officer at port of arrival in Canada."<sup>9</sup> In order to identify the immigrant, these cards contained spaces for name and surname, country arrived from, name of ship, European port of departure and date of arrival in Canada. On the reverse side appeared a notice informing the immigrant to save the card for three years, and to present it to authorities upon request. As this information was printed in twelve languages, one of which was Ukrainian, a transcript follows:

Ruthenian. Cro kampky mreda mpu poku sosbamu.
Tlepeda so nokazamu upragnekam npabume pens bch hure, hanoru zasthagotoml, moro.<sup>10</sup>

Although the Ukrainian language was fourth on the list of twelve, the information was printed in such a garbled fashion that no one could decipher it. This is a prime example of Latin alphabet transliteration of a simple notice to early immigrants. It is not very difficult to imagine what happened to Ukrainian surnames at the time of their recording into official documents.

5. On applications for naturalization, sworn affidavits or census reports, many names were also misspelled.<sup>11</sup>

6. Because the majority of Ukrainian immigrants to Canada at the end of the 19th century were basically illiterate both in English and in Ukrainian, they relied on officials to record their names on applications for naturalization -- they simply signed with a cross in the appropriate space.

Again, distortions occurred because

Slavonian languages are said to be soft in their own speech, but our letters (English) clumsily render their sound and make them of cumbrous length.<sup>12</sup>

7. Many names and surnames were misspelled in spite of an immigrant's own signature on the very same document. V.J. Kaye cites an example from the Supreme Court N.W.T., Edmonton, February 24, 1904, where one Jakow Matijczuk signed a sworn affidavit on one page and on the other, the clerk of the court misspelled the same name as Jakow Matyszuk.<sup>13</sup>

Were the misspellings, distortions and involuntary modifications of Ukrainian surnames deliberate or accidental? Did they result from prejudice or indifference towards the "men in sheepskin coats," those "filthy, penniless and ignorant foreigners in progressive and intelligent communities."<sup>14</sup> No clear explanation could be provided to answer this question satisfactorily.

Improvement in documentation of early Ukrainian immigrants began in 1904,<sup>15</sup> when better qualified individuals entered the field, some of whom were sons and daughters of the pioneer settlers. Theodore Nemirsky is an example of an efficient and meticulous Ukrainian Commissioner of Oaths, and postmaster of Wostok, Alberta, who insisted that in the preparation of documents, exact baptismal spelling as recorded on a birth certificate was to be followed.<sup>16</sup> Since the majority of Ukrainian baptismal names in Galicia (Halychyna) were documented in Latin on birth certificates, so too, Nemirsky implemented such a form in documents, for example: Demetrius (Cybulak, Applic. No. 2709, Pakan, Alberta); Romanus (Nykilchuk, Applic. No. 3027, Beaver Lake, Alberta).<sup>17</sup>

Voluntary Change

The question of whether or not a newcomer to this country should "Canadianize" his name has always been considered by this Department (of Citizenship and Immigration) to be strictly a matter of personal preference in so far as the newcomer himself is concerned. Officers of this Department in no way encourage or discourage immigrants in this respect.<sup>18</sup>

Voluntary changes or modifications in Ukrainian names and surnames were initiated by the owners of the names or surnames themselves, after living a number of years in a new Canadian milieu.

Should an immigrant have desired to alter his surname in any way, he was free to do so, provided he was a Canadian citizen. Each province had its own Change of Name

Act:

In the majority of provinces ... an immigrant cannot legally change his name unless he becomes a Canadian citizen. When citizenship is conferred upon him, the certificate is issued under the name he gave when he came to Canada. If subsequent to his arrival he has adopted some slight variation in the spelling of his name, this variation upon request, be shown in brackets on the citizenship certificate.<sup>19</sup>

Voluntary name and surname changing resulted after involuntary modifications which had already occurred orally: "What changes names most is the abrasion of common speech."<sup>20</sup>

Seasonal work and earnings in the prairie provinces were small, therefore many Ukrainian men went to work in the coal mines of British Columbia, on the construction of the Canadian Norther, the Canadian Pacific, and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, as well as in many construction camps.<sup>21</sup> As the employer was usually English, it was natural that all workers' names tended inevitably to be assimilated with more familiar names having similar sounds.<sup>22</sup> Thus Mykhaylo became known as Mike, Ivan as John, and Danylo as Dan. Once these names were adopted by the Ukrainian men, they were used constantly, regardless of the fact that these changes were not recorded.

Exposed to the urban life after many months of on and off labour, the young Ukrainian man sought a better life for himself and for his family, and if it meant changing his name to get a better job, he did so. Having experienced ridicule and frustration by having his name mispronounced and misspelled both by employers and by friends, the Ukrainian immigrant found it easier to change his surname and provide his child with a baptismal name similar in sound or identical with that found in English.<sup>23</sup> For example, Mariya - Mary; Marko - Mark; Petro - Peter.

People who lived in rural communities did not experience immediate frustration and ridicule of their names as did those who were constantly exposed to life in an urban English community. It is for this reason that surname changes, be they drastic or minor, occurred more frequently among Ukrainians living in urban centers.

The pattern for Canadianization or voluntary change of Ukrainian surnames is typical for any immigrant to a new land. The first generation remains faithful to the old customs of language, religion and culture because European immigrants ... look upon the culture of any immigration country as inferior to their own and refuse on the whole to be robbed of their

, cultural heritage.<sup>24</sup>

The second generation -- descendants of the first pioneers, having been educated in and acclimatized to the new land, hasten to accept more readily the new way of life and its implications. They can also rationalize name changing. However, some second generation immigrants are caught in the cross-current influences of two powerful groups, both inflated with the idea of their own superiority. Each influence exerts a cultural pull, and it is in this situation that these second generation immigrants suffer cultural tension.<sup>25</sup> The second generation immigrant does not know to which of the two competing cultural groups he really belongs. It is within this generation that choices are made for either of the two cultures:

A two-way traffic of tension will exist for the child. Under certain conditions he will suffer conflict with his parents only. Under other conditions the conflict will emanate from the host society. Conflict with parents will arise when the children are assimilated and the parents are not. The parents will then try to halt the child's assimilation progress. There will be no tension with the host community as the child has made the expected choice.<sup>26</sup>

The third generation, even though still of Ukrainian descent, does not feel any closeness and need of traditional customs and language. It is this generation that will also readily assimilate more foreign elements into its daily life, including the naming of their offspring with completely English names, such as Virginia, Betty, William, Douglas and others. They will also readily modify their surnames and become absorbed into the Anglo-Saxon element of Canadian society:

No tension at all will arise for those children ... if they themselves are assimilated and their parents are also assimilated. Neither of the two competing groups will then have any real cause to exercise pressure on the child.<sup>27</sup>

Reasons for Name Changing

Ukrainian immigrants changed or modified their names and surnames for many reasons, stemming from both psychological and social pressures. Certain surname changes occurred for the sake of expediency, ease of understanding and pronunciation, while others resulted from cumbersome length, spelling or funny sound when spoken. Many Ukrainians with non-English surnames felt foreign and inferior in the new environment. Others simply wanted to avoid embarrassing or hostile confrontations with English speaking employers and neighbours. "To be one of them" meant promotion in business, and instant success without any discrimination:

It is true that there were times in Canada, especially between the First and Second World Wars, when because of the depression, Canadian employers discriminated against foreigners because of their origin, so that a Berezynski was in no way able to find a job, unless he rechristened himself Birch ... the number of these rechristenings increases with each passing day.<sup>28</sup>

An article in Ukrayins'kyj Holos (Ukrainian Voice), March 29, 1911 is perhaps the earliest report of name changing among any of Canada's first settlers. The article says:

Why should a Hrynn'ko change to Harry, and a Danylo to Dan, when it's nicer and pleasanter to keep one's original name. The same with one's surname. In what way is Johnson nicer than Tatsyuk, or Smith instead of Danyl'-chuk.

Such changes occur mostly in cities, and we should get rid of this habit.<sup>29</sup>

In spite of appeals by the Ukrainian press, the practice of changing names and surnames continued. Descendants of the first Ukrainian pioneers bore non-Ukrainian personal names: Judy, Angela, Neil and others. Church baptismal records revealed that even though children were being christened with proper baptismal, calendar saints' names, anglicized forms of these names predominated in everyday life: Myron - Morris; Dokiya - Doris; Demko - Duncan.<sup>30</sup>

Obituary notices entered into English presses by children of grandchildren of the deceased did not always provide correct identification of an individual, since both personal and family surnames were entered in distorted form. The patterns of surname modifications will be examined in the next chapter.

Conclusions

In summation it could be stated that Ukrainian surname changes were of two types, involuntary and voluntary. Both changes were either delicate or drastic, the former resulting primarily from poor transliteration of the original surname onto legal documents, based on the fact that the Ukrainian surname was vulnerable to distortion because of the Cyrillic script which lacks corresponding equivalents in the English language,<sup>31</sup> the latter from growing social and psychological pressures of the new English environment.

In the process of physically changing from a Ukrainian to a Canadian environment, from a typically Ukrainian to a Canadianized surname, at one time or another, many an immigrant suffered indecision and frustration before making his final choice. All generations of Ukrainian immigrants had to face the cultural conflict, and a decision had to be made.

It was only between the First and Second World Wars, but primarily after the Second World War, with the immigration of many Ukrainian intellectuals, professionals and tradesmen from Europe, that a reverse trend towards original Ukrainian names and surnames occurred. Offspring were being named Vera, Ivan, Taras, Ol'ha and other Ukrainian names. Today surnames are being retained and are rarely modified.<sup>32</sup>

At the time of marriage in Canada, as in most countries, the wife loses her maiden name and takes on her husband's surname. This custom continues even after she has been widowed. The law, however, does not compel a woman to use her husband's surname.<sup>33</sup> She may continue to use her maiden name, or as Ukrainian girls who marry outside their cultural group and wish to keep their identity do, retain the maiden name and hyphenate it to the married, foreign one. For example: Mariya Kohut-Peterson; Halya Petryshyn-McNeil.

Today, Ukrainian surnames in Canada exist in their original distorted and changed forms. The practice of changing or Canadianizing one's surname continues among Ukrainians in Canada, with very little stigma attached to the act itself. There are, however, many more Ukrainians who prefer to retain their original Ukrainian family name irrelevant of its misspelling. Other Ukrainians correct their surnames orthographically and phonologically, while still others alter their surnames to meet immediate social and personal needs.

Onomastic/Linguistic Analysis

The problem of name and surname changes of immigrant groups in Canada and the United States is not new in onomastic research. E.C. Smith lists numerous works on the topic of name and surname changes in his excellent bibliography.<sup>1</sup> The problem of investigating Slavic anthroponymic changes in North America was first raised by J.B. Rudnyc'kyj in 1949.<sup>2</sup> Subsequently in 1958<sup>3</sup> he presented a scheme for onomastic analysis of Slavic surname changes in Canada based on his former investigations in the field of toponymy of 1938.<sup>4</sup>

This scheme attempts to classify immigrant surnames according to the degree of change or assimilation in relation to the new surname.<sup>5</sup> The scheme itself is divided into three groups: 1) full assimilation, 2) partial assimilation and 3) hybridization.<sup>6</sup> Using this scheme, Rudnyc'kyj made general conclusions as to the way in which immigrant languages adapted their anthroponymic systems to the onomastic patterns of the dominant language system.<sup>7</sup> One of his pupils, Robert B. Klymasz, in his Master's thesis entitled The Canadianization of Slavic Surnames: A Study in Language Contact, attempted to classify Slavic surname changes according to the kind of change, the actual linguistic behaviour shown by the change in a surname,<sup>8</sup> rather than degrees of change, as shown by Rudnyc'kyj. Klymasz's scheme was based on four principles: that the old Slavic name can undergo orthographical, phonological, morphological and lexicological adjustments.<sup>9</sup>

Comparatively speaking, both schemes do correlate with each other. In this thesis the author will use Rudnyc'kyj's typological scheme, including a marginal category of Slavic to Slavic surname changes, with the necessary sub-categories demonstrating orthographical, phonological or both changes in Ukrainian surnames excerpted from the Manitoba Gazette (January, 1957 - June, 1976).

1) Patterns of Surname Changes

One of the most basic processes in the history of topo- and anthroponomy in the "new" settlement areas of the world is the process of interferences of one system of names on another, resulting in various formal and semantic changes in one or both systems.<sup>1</sup>

Since alterations or modifications which occur in Ukrainian surnames in Canada are either delicate or drastic, they bear witness to human ingenuity. A transplanted Ukrainian surname may be slightly modified in a new Canadian environment, but still retain elements of its original. Another Ukrainian surname may be completely changed where its original elements disappear.

The most frequent modification or adjustment occurs as an error created through transliteration. Still other changes occur with the clipping off or shortening of a syllable at the beginning, in the middle or on the end of a surname, along with orthographical and phonological adjustments or translation. E.C. Smith states:

As surnames have undergone various corruptions and changes in the countries where they arose, it is not surprising that this process of corruption and change was accelerated when brought to America. For the unlettered pioneer, names of all nationalities took on a rough phonetic spelling. There was, and still is, a strong propensity to alter an unfamiliar name into a familiar name or word with a similar sound ...

The longer, more awkward or unpronounceable one are shortened and simplified, generally with the idea of making them more like English names or at least easier on the eye and familiar with the English tongue. Some are deliberately translated into the more popular names ... There are many other common corruptions and substitutions of consonants ... Each vowel may change to any other vowel.<sup>2</sup>

In the following section, Ukrainian surname changes are examined to determine: 1) the processes involved in the pattern of Ukrainian surname Canadianization, 2) the frequency of Canadianization and 3) the most popular pattern of modification.

The patterns of Ukrainian surname changes will be examined according to the following typological scheme:

A. Full Assimilation

1. Incidental
2. Translation

B. Partial Assimilation

1. Orthographical and Phonological Adjustments
2. Final shortening (apocope)
3. Medial shortening (syncope)
4. Initial shortening (aphaeresis)
5. Combination of Abbreviations

C. Hybridization

1. Syncretic
2. Conglomerative

<sup>2</sup>E.C. Smith, New Dictionary of American Family Names (New York: Harper and Row, 1956), p. xxii.

D. Slavic to Slavic (Internal Changes)

A. Full Assimilation

Full assimilation is the most common way of modifying an immigrant surname to the foreign or host language.<sup>3</sup> The two types of full assimilation are:

1. Incidental or facultative substitution of names or surnames for others, showing no connection between both.<sup>4</sup>

Examples of such changes drawn from this thesis to explain the phenomenon are:

Boychuk - Mabb	(103.23)
Darowski - Stevens	(99.24)
Hnatiuk - Boulton	(103.24)
Prociuk - Roberts	(98.23)
Tkatchuk - Karman	(91.50)
Zwizda - Mitchell	(104.34)

Reasons for such drastic changes are not easily explained. It could be because a given surname would have an unpleasant sound or meaning if it were translated, and not all surnames were suitable for translation, as their etymological meaning remained obscure. It could also be that Ukrainians changing their surname preferred an Anglo-Saxon

<sup>4</sup> J.B. Rudnyc'kyj, "Anthroponymic Changes in Canada and the U.S.A.," op.cit., p. 35.

surname rather than a modified version of the original.<sup>5</sup>

2. Literal or approximate translation of the original Ukrainian surname is the second alternative to full assimilation.<sup>6</sup> Only three examples could be cited from this thesis.

Cerkownyj-Church (89.48)

Iveniuk-Johnson (90.41)

Krawec-Taylor (97.13)

A reverse trend in translation of Ukrainian surnames back into the original is only cited in the Manitoba Gazette on August 3, 1975 under the "Change of Name" announcements. Mr. Andrew Hardbread changed his name to Antin Tverdokhlib, the original surname having been "Canadianized" through translation by his parents. These occurrences are rare. However, the reasons for the reverse trend would serve as an interesting topic for a special scholarly inquiry.

B. Partial Assimilation

In the process of Canadianizing Ukrainian surnames in Canada, many changes occur as a result of orthographical and phonological adjustments. The following four processes were also found to be most popular: 1) final shortening, 2) medial shortening, 3) initial shortening and 4) combination of shortenings.<sup>7</sup> Generally, each is accompanied by orthographical and phonological adjustments.

1. Orthographical and Phonological Adjustments

The two most widely used and most accepted methods of Ukrainian surname modification are by orthographical and phonological adjustment.

Changes in orthography stem from: a) ambiguous transliteration of the original Ukrainian surname, b) from the desire to enhance a Ukrainian surname, which is identical in pronunciation to another surname common to the new language system, c) in order for the surname to resemble its English pronunciation,<sup>8</sup> d) the Cyrillic alphabet has graphemes which cannot be reproduced in the Latin alphabet, therefore certain consonant clusters . . . for the same sound. For example

"у" - ts, c, cz

"х" - h, k, ch, kh

<sup>8</sup>Robert B. Klymasz, The Canadianization of Slavic Surnames: A Study in Language Contact, op. cit., p. 24.

Changes in orthography to render Canadian a Ukrainian surname does not necessarily simplify the spelling.<sup>9</sup> For example, if the sibilants cz, sz and c are revised to ch, sh and ts, they still retain the original sound of the surname, but still complicate the spelling. For this reason, more drastic alterations may occur. Examples of some basic changes in orthography are:

j - i or y	ks - x
u - oo	w - v
i - y	cz - ch
y - i	sz - sh
k - c

Examples of Ukrainian surnames that demonstrate this process and which are found in this thesis, are:

Bojczak - Boychak	(92.38)
Cobrinsky - Kobrinsky	(88.25)
Jacentiuk - Yacentiuk	(90.11)
Paszczak - Paschak	(102.50)
Stryk - Strick	(92.27)
Szot - Shott	(105.22)

Phonological changes in Ukrainian surnames occur

either automatically or through close affinity in sound with a non-Slavic surname.<sup>10</sup> Examples of phonological changes:

a) Substitution of vowels and consonants suffice to change the character of the surname, but not to change its structure drastically.<sup>11</sup>

Bodgan - Bogden (88.28)

Malnick - Melnick (102.14)

These simple phonological substitutions may be accompanied by orthographical adjustments.

Domansky - Demanski (88.36)

b) Mispronunciation of the original Ukrainian surname may have caused an ambiguous transliteration.<sup>12</sup>

The c could suggest the sound ck Hzenciuc (Hrynchuck) - Hrynchuk 102.33

c could suggest s Maskiu (Maskiw) - Maskiew 105.2

i (sound ee takes on the sound of the "i" in it)

p could suggest ph Pylypiw - Phillipew 101.43

z could suggest s, etc. Zinco - Simcoe 88.8

c) Shift in stress from the first to the last syllable in certain Ukrainian surnames may have caused the mutation of the original vowel.<sup>13</sup>

<sup>11</sup> Ibid.

<sup>12</sup> Ibid., p. 30.

Ukr. surname Baran

Stress shift Baran

New surname Baron (86.45)

d) Removing the initial elements i leaving the full vowel:<sup>14</sup>

Wachniuk - Washnuk (101.9)

e) Falling diphthong ow simplified to o:<sup>15</sup>

Melkowsky - Melcosky (105.9)

f) Change of s to c or ts to s, or c to s:<sup>16</sup>

Kucyk - Kusyk (94.29)

g) Change of guttural kh to ch<sup>17</sup>

kh to r

kh to h

sz to s

h) Other changes:

y - a u - o

dz - j

Dziaduk - Jarduck 94.20

o - a a - i

w - ff

Bozyhora - Bozahora 103.32

f - n

sh - s

Bilansky - Belinsky 94.33

iuk - ick

dz - z

<sup>13</sup> Ibid., p. 31.

<sup>14</sup> Ibid., p. 33.

<sup>15</sup> Ibid., p. 35.

i) Transposition: From the point of view of orthography, the new name has retained all the letters found in the old surname, but from the phonological point of view, its sequence has been altered, resulting in one letter losing its original sound and producing a new one.<sup>18</sup>

Mandziuk - Mandzuik (90.15)

Phonological adjustments in Ukrainian surnames are motivated by the fact that similar sounding surnames already exist in the new language system and the name changer feels less remorse for having transposed vowels or consonants rather than fully translating or hybridizing the original surname.<sup>19</sup>

2. Final Shortening (Apocope)

Final shortening or apocope refers to the omission of the suffix or final syllable in a surname.<sup>20</sup> Examples for this phenomenon are:

Lebedinsky - Lebedin (100.51)

Ostapiuk - Ostap (86.33)

Sorokato - Soroka (102.41)

with orthographic adjustments:

Maksymczuk - Maksim (90.9)

Ostrovskey - Ostrove (93.28)

with phonological adjustments:

Obertanic - Oberton (105.6)

Romach - Roman (89.35)

3. Medial Shortening (Syncope)

Medial shortening or syncope refers to the omission of one or more morphemes in the middle of a surname:<sup>21</sup>

Safianuk - Safnuk (93.13)

Susukaylo - Sukaylo (99.46)

with orthographical adjustments:

Wasyleniuk - Wasylnuk (86.10)

with phonological adjustments:

Palamariuk - Palmeruk (104.25)

4. Initial Shortening (Aphaeresis)

Initial shortening of aphaeresis refers to the omission of the prefix or the beginning syllable in a surname.<sup>22</sup>

Slusarchuk - Sarchuk (89.36)

Suchodolski - Dolski (101.20)

<sup>21</sup> Ibid.

with orthographical adjustments:

Tkachuk - Kaychuk (101.32)

with phonological adjustments:

Poltorak - Torch (86.5)

5. Combined shortening

Dynkavitch - Davin (93.7)

Korytko - Krok (102.10)

Strynadka - Strank (94.16)

C. Hybridization

Hybridization of Ukrainian surnames is a typical trend which occurs wherever a bilingual or multilingual population cohabits.<sup>23</sup> There are two types of hybridizations: 1. Syncretic and 2. Conglomerative. The former is characterized by a formation of elements from two languages, taken and integrated as a neologism in both languages.<sup>24</sup> In other words, one syllable from the original Ukrainian surname is retained and combined with a syllable from another language system. Examples of this type of trend are:

Bobulenko - Bobby (86.14)

Harapiak - Harman (87.34)

Iwanow - Ivanhoe (101.40)

Makowski - Mason (91.19)

<sup>23</sup> Ibid., pp. 39-40.

<sup>24</sup> Ibid.

The later type of hybridization may be termed conglomerative and is characterized by a merging or collection of letters and/or phonemes from both languages. In other words, one or more letters from the original Ukrainian surname are retained in the newly created, hybridized surname. Examples of this are:

Berezuk - Barry	(97.13)
Hollowchuk - Hall	(89.13)
Mahinka - Martin	(102.29)
Pawluk - Pollock	(88.7)

D. Slavic to Slavic

The marginal category of Slavic to Slavic surname changes is unique in itself. This category is characterized by Ukrainian surnames altered to other Slavic (not necessarily Ukrainian) surnames. In examining the examples presented in this thesis, two possible sub-categories may be found. These are: 1. Ukrainian surnames changes of a corrective nature, and 2. Ukrainian surname changes of convenience.

It is quite difficult to make the distinction as to whether a certain surname fits into one or the other sub-category since documentation for these changes are unavailable. Nevertheless, it is possible to provide certain probable explanations for surname changes of convenience and correction in this way:

1. The desire to break with the past and be identified by a new Slavic surname.

2. The desire to legalize a surname inaccurately being used for many years.
3. To alter a derogatory or unpleasant sounding surname.
4. To correct a misspelled Ukrainian surname recorded in official documents.
5. Ukrainian immigrants to Canada may have used falsified documents to enter the country after the Second World War.
6. The desire by a woman to resume using her maiden name after divorce or death of her husband.
7. Children who have lost their father, wish to adopt their mother's maiden name.
8. The desire to have the same adopted name as another family member.

Examples of surnames typical to this category:

Beltowski - Shewchenko	(105.14)
Chuchman - Holodnuik	(92.42)
Leskiw - Sawka	(86.37)
Moisanko - Mosienko	(90.12)
Sebatski - Sabeski	(104.38)
Tomkowyd - Tymkovich	(102.6)

Chapter III

Conclusions and Tasks for Future Research

Of the four types of surname changes put forward in this thesis, the largest from the numerical point of view is the partially assimilated category. This fact is significant in that it shows that the majority of Ukrainian surname changers from the years 1957-1976 preserved some elements of their original surname. It also indicates that the majority of Ukrainian surname changers were not concerned merely with Canadianizing their surnames, but wished to adapt them to the written and spoken efficiency of the new host language system.

It is not easy to determine exactly why certain people changed their surnames and others did not. A further inquiry is needed, taking into account the post-War (1949) Ukrainian immigration to Canada, its psychological and social conditioning. Special consideration to the Canadian-born generation of these post-War immigrants could provide valuable information on the amount of retention or modification of the original Ukrainian surname, because the problems of Ukrainian immigrants in Canada after the Second World War differed from those of the earlier pioneer immigrants in the 1890's.

For the advancement of knowledge in the field of Ukrainian onomastics-anthroponomy in Canada, further research work on the following questions is needed:

1. Non-Ukrainian elements in Ukrainian surnames.
2. Anthroponomy in Ukrainian-Canadian literature.
3. Analogical research in the field of Ukrainian personal names in Canada.
4. Ukrainian-Canadian anthroponymic sayings, proverbs and humorous surnames.

Chapter IV

Dictionary of Ukrainian-Canadian Surname Changes

The dictionary lists all Ukrainian surname changes drawn from the Manitoba Gazette, dated January, 1957 (volume 86) to July, 1976 (volume 105). The dictionary is divided into the following four sections: 1) full assimilation; 2) partial assimilation; 3) Hybridization and a marginal category 4) Slavic to Slavic. Each entry presents the following: a) The old Ukrainian surname, as brought to Canada with any of its alternative spellings or variations. These are separated from the first by being placed in parentheses. b) The new name; c) The volume number (placed to the left of the decimal point) and the issue number of the Manitoba Gazette (placed to the right of the decimal point) from which the name was excerpted.

In cases where identical surname changes/modifications were duplicated, the first chronological listing documented in the Manitoba Gazette has been utilized. Surnames documented (LF) were collected by the author during her field work in Winnipeg and vicinity during 1975-76.
